

ALL DENY "JOKE" KILLED WOMAN IN PARK GOLF HOUSE

Only the Waiter Testifies Seeing Fatal Battle Before Miss Tristram Died.

LIEUTENANT IN PARTY.
McCarthy Swears Tragedy Occurred Before Midnight, but Doctor Was Called at 1.41.

Bronx Coroner Shonku held a hearing to-day preliminary to the inquest into the death of Miss Alice Tristram, the Irish singer and member of a prominent Dublin family, at the Van Cortlandt Park Golf House early Sunday morning. It was his belief that evidence would back his theory that Miss Tristram was slain in a cruel practical joke, in which she was induced to drink a dis-infecting solution of carbolic acid and lay in the belief that it was liquor.

The coroner brought out that Police Lieut. John J. McCarthy of the West One Hundred and Fifty-second street station was sitting beside Miss Tristram when she drank the fatal draught and toppled from her chair. McCarthy was called as a witness, and his testimony was evasive.

NOBODY SAW THE FATAL BOTTLE.

All of the men who were at the table with Miss Tristram denied knowledge of a joke or that they had seen the bottle on the table.

Policeman James Gillespie of the Kingsbridge station testified that he was sent to the Golf House at 2.15 o'clock Sunday morning. Although Lieut. McCarthy and Mounted Policemen Pink and Schmidt were already there, he took charge. He was unable to learn anything except that the young woman had suddenly become ill. Sergeant Donahue arrived from Fordham Hospital at 2.45 o'clock and got from O'Connell the bottle from which the carbolic acid had been drunk. O'Connell produced the bottle.

Thomas J. Totten and his brother, D'Arcy Totten, real estate dealers at Two Hundred and Thirtieth street and Broadway, testified that they were at the table with Miss Tristram. Thomas Totten said he had gone to the Golf House with his brother, Edward J. Gallagher, an employee of the Comptroller's Office; Joseph Gibbons and William Lappe. They met Lieut. McCarthy there.

At the party had down to the table, Totten said, he noticed Miss Tristram sitting at another table. Just as he left the table Miss Tristram joined the party. He denied seeing the bottle of disinfectant. D'Arcy Totten corroborated his brother's statement, as did Gallagher, Lappe and Gibbons.

WAITER ORDERED TO HIDE DISINFECTANT.

Waiter Hollis swore he had been ordered not to serve Miss Tristram with liquor earlier in the evening, but O'Connell had rescinded this order. He had seen the disinfectant bottle on the table and when Miss Tristram fell back in her chair he was ordered to remove it by O'Connell. Then the signs suddenly vanished. O'Connell said to him, "Put the bottle in the pantry. When I want it, I will tell you to get it."

Lieut. McCarthy said that after Miss Tristram dropped unconscious all he did was to go to the door and keep everybody in the room. He didn't telephone for an ambulance or call for assistance. He was sure Miss Tristram became ill before midnight, though it was shown no ambulance call was sent till 1.41.

Dr. Paul Dolan of Tindale avenue said he had been called to administer to Mrs. O'Connell, who was ill. He was talking with O'Connell when Miss Tristram was stricken. He administered emetics and advised that an ambulance be called. He didn't notice the bottle.

"NOISE SUPPRESSOR" WILL CARE FOR BEGGAR.

Mrs. Rice Saves Woman, Convicted of Using Baby as Decoy, From Prison.

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice of the Ansonia Hotel, "the noise suppressor," appeared in Special Sessions to-day, before Justice McInerney, Steinert and Forker, and pleaded for Mrs. Ida Katz, who had been convicted on a charge of begging and using her baby as a decoy for sympathetic hearts.

Mrs. Katz, who lives at No. 22 Clinton street, was brought into court today for sentence. With her was her three-year-old baby, Sarah. The woman had been arrested three times before for begging. Mrs. Axman, the probation officer, told the Justice she thought the woman could get along now with the help of influential friends. Justice McInerney asked Mrs. Rice to take the stand.

"Both she and her baby have posed as models for my daughter," said Mrs. Rice. "Her husband treated her brutally. She and the child were starving, but kept it from me. I am convinced she fell on the stoop at Broadway and Forty-fourth street, where she was arrested, from exhaustion. She will never be convicted again. I will provide for her and her child."

"The Court will parole her in your custody," said the Justice. "In the event that you can't manage her we will send her to prison."

His Tuberculosis Hospital. The Board of Supervisors of Westchester County voted yesterday to build a hospital with 200 beds for the treatment of tuberculosis, at an expense of $1,000,000.

FINANCIER WHO FINDS HIMSELF A DIAMOND KING

MONTANA HORSE DRINKS BEER FOR BROADWAY CROWD

Empties Glass Three Times in Front of Hotel Albany and Blocks Traffic.

A man describing himself as Dr. Fred E. Ellis of Hamilton, Montana, and wearing the sort of attire that is associated with Montana in the comic weeklies, blocked traffic on Broadway at Forty-first street to-day with the aid of a horse and three glasses of beer.

The horse stood in front of the Hotel Albany and drank the beer, which was brought out, fresh and foaming from the bar.

"One year ago to-day," said Dr. Ellis, "I rode this horse, Don Flano, into the bar of the Hotel Albany, Montana, and gave him a glass of beer at the bar; Fritz Heineke and a lot of other prominent men were there, including I. G. Denny, City Attorney of Butte."

"Mr. Denny told me I shouldn't ride my horse into barrooms. He said that such things give the West a bad reputation in the East. I offered to bet him $1,000 I could ride the horse into a barroom in New York and give him a glass of beer without being arrested. He took the bet with the stipulation that must make the attempt within a year and must ride into either the Astor, Belmont, Knickerbocker or Albany Hotels."

LOSES $1,000, BUT IT ISN'T HIS FAULT.

"There is no way of getting a horse into the barrooms of the Astor, Knickerbocker or Belmont and I couldn't get permission anyhow. I tried to get permission from Mr. Murphy, the proprietor of the Albany, to ride my horse into his place, but he has failed to give it, so I am doing the next best thing, and giving the horse his beer on the street. Of course I lose my $1,000, and the expense of bringing the horse to New York."

The doctor denied that he is going to exhibit the horse on the stage, although he admitted Don Flano was a mighty smart horse and could do almost anything but talk. A moving picture crew took numerous photographs of the horse and the crowd, but the doctor said he didn't know how the moving men knew what was going to happen at the Hotel Albany at a particular hour to-day.

"The idea of giving a defenseless horse beer," said a sharp-featured woman in the crowd, at the height of the excitement. "It ought to be reported to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals."

"No, lady," said a sad-faced young man standing by. "It ought to be reported to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Chorus Men. Here they give that horse three beers when he doesn't need it and I haven't had a drink for three days."

JAY IS LOST, WOE ON SHIP.

He is a Brindle Bull Pup, and the Mascot of the Delaware.

Jay is down on the records of the battleship Delaware, now in this port, as a deserter, and all the members of the crew who can get shore leave are searching the city for the missing member of the ship's company. Incidentally, Jay is a dog of the brindle bull breed.

"It is suspected some visitor to the ship carried Jay off. Inasmuch as Jay is the official ship's mascot, there is more excitement over his disappearance than if the first officer had broken his leg. Some of the sailors declare they will never go to sea in the Delaware if Jay is not found and returned to the ship."

Taft Accepts Invitations. WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—President Taft to-day accepted invitations to attend the dinners of the Ohio Society in New York Jan. 27 and the Tippecanoe Club at Cleveland Jan. 28. The latter dinner is in celebration of the anniversary of the birth of President McKinley.

Hale's Honey Of Horehound and Tar

Loosens the Phlegm Alleviates Irritation Arrests Tickling Soothes and Heals Contains no opium nor anything harmful All Druggists

For Coughs and Colds

His Tubercular Drope Cure in One Month

RYAN BECOMES KING OF DIAMONDS; FIRST GEMS HERE

Investment as Partner of Late King Leopold Has Unexpected Source of Profit.

The first fruits of Thomas F. Ryan's business partnership with King Leopold of Belgium are in the New York Custom House. They are a consignment of 240 uncut African diamonds. Some are as big as a pea; a few are a quarter of an inch and more in diameter. What they are worth nobody knows.

Mr. Ryan was very much surprised to find himself a diamond king. He was equally if not more delighted. In 1906 Mr. Ryan became King Leopold's chief business partner by putting up the greater part of $1,500,000 for the Congo Free State concession. Since then he has directed the spending of boat loads of dollars on mining experts and engineers. He had hazy dreams of rubber and gold and copper and lumber and silver. Instead, he finds himself the principal owner of a diamond farm of 16,000 acres.

The region may turn out to be a Golconda. There is not much doubt that there are a thousand times as many gems there as there came from. From now on Mr. Ryan will never know what morning will bring him a cable inquiring what he wants done with a new Kohinoor, or Star of India.

It was generally conceded to be a clever move on the part of King Leopold when he induced Mr. Ryan and some of his American associates to take a share in the development of the Congo. Stories of atrocious had become rather persistent. The huge concession was finally entrusted to the Societe Forestiere et Miniere du Congo, King Leopold taking a one-fourth interest, the Congo Free State taking a half and Mr. Ryan and his colleagues taking the other fourth, which gave the Americans the undisputed possession of a territory as large as Vermont and New Hampshire combined.

"The Court will take judicial cognizance," said the Magistrate, after learning that the damage to the cab could be repaired for $5, "that a taxicab is no place for a lady contortionist who is lonely. If you will pay the $5 I will let it go at that."

"Haven't you the money?" asked the Magistrate. "Yes, sir, lots more than that," she said and blushed some more. "But I can't very well get it with all these men around. Er— I can't just."

"Oh, I see," said the Magistrate and blushed himself. "Just show the lady she came out in a minute waving a $5 bill triumphantly and handed it to the chauffeur and was allowed to go."

Iola Mandille, a contortionist and dancer by profession, just could not make her talented limbs behave at times, she explained to Magistrate Herrman in the West Side court to-day. And that was why she kicked the glass front out of a taxicab in front of Berry's restaurant at Seventh avenue and Forty-seventh street last night. She did not remember just how she came to be in the cab, but Policeman White was able to explain that part of it.

"I saw two waiters come out of the place with the lady between them," he said, "and they helped her into the cab and shut the door. Next thing I knew the front of the cab was coming out in big slivers of glass. The chauffeur turned around to see what was going on and she snapped off his cap with the toe of her shoe."

"She said something about being lonely in there all by herself. Before I could get to her she had started on the side window and that came out. Her foot got caught in a wedge of glass and she couldn't get it out and we couldn't get her out and she lay there on her back and made a disorderly noise and caused a crowd to collect until we got in from the other side and lifted her out."

"The Court will take judicial cognizance," said the Magistrate, after learning that the damage to the cab could be repaired for $5, "that a taxicab is no place for a lady contortionist who is lonely. If you will pay the $5 I will let it go at that."

"Haven't you the money?" asked the Magistrate. "Yes, sir, lots more than that," she said and blushed some more. "But I can't very well get it with all these men around. Er— I can't just."

"Oh, I see," said the Magistrate and blushed himself. "Just show the lady she came out in a minute waving a $5 bill triumphantly and handed it to the chauffeur and was allowed to go."

Iola Mandille, a contortionist and dancer by profession, just could not make her talented limbs behave at times, she explained to Magistrate Herrman in the West Side court to-day. And that was why she kicked the glass front out of a taxicab in front of Berry's restaurant at Seventh avenue and Forty-seventh street last night. She did not remember just how she came to be in the cab, but Policeman White was able to explain that part of it.

"I saw two waiters come out of the place with the lady between them," he said, "and they helped her into the cab and shut the door. Next thing I knew the front of the cab was coming out in big slivers of glass. The chauffeur turned around to see what was going on and she snapped off his cap with the toe of her shoe."

"She said something about being lonely in there all by herself. Before I could get to her she had started on the side window and that came out. Her foot got caught in a wedge of glass and she couldn't get it out and we couldn't get her out and she lay there on her back and made a disorderly noise and caused a crowd to collect until we got in from the other side and lifted her out."

"The Court will take judicial cognizance," said the Magistrate, after learning that the damage to the cab could be repaired for $5, "that a taxicab is no place for a lady contortionist who is lonely. If you will pay the $5 I will let it go at that."

"Haven't you the money?" asked the Magistrate. "Yes, sir, lots more than that," she said and blushed some more. "But I can't very well get it with all these men around. Er— I can't just."

"Oh, I see," said the Magistrate and blushed himself. "Just show the lady she came out in a minute waving a $5 bill triumphantly and handed it to the chauffeur and was allowed to go."

Iola Mandille, a contortionist and dancer by profession, just could not make her talented limbs behave at times, she explained to Magistrate Herrman in the West Side court to-day. And that was why she kicked the glass front out of a taxicab in front of Berry's restaurant at Seventh avenue and Forty-seventh street last night. She did not remember just how she came to be in the cab, but Policeman White was able to explain that part of it.

"I saw two waiters come out of the place with the lady between them," he said, "and they helped her into the cab and shut the door. Next thing I knew the front of the cab was coming out in big slivers of glass. The chauffeur turned around to see what was going on and she snapped off his cap with the toe of her shoe."

DANCER KICKED TAXI'S INSIDE OUT IN MERRY WHIRL

Investment as Partner of Late King Leopold Has Unexpected Source of Profit.

The first fruits of Thomas F. Ryan's business partnership with King Leopold of Belgium are in the New York Custom House. They are a consignment of 240 uncut African diamonds. Some are as big as a pea; a few are a quarter of an inch and more in diameter. What they are worth nobody knows.

Mr. Ryan was very much surprised to find himself a diamond king. He was equally if not more delighted. In 1906 Mr. Ryan became King Leopold's chief business partner by putting up the greater part of $1,500,000 for the Congo Free State concession. Since then he has directed the spending of boat loads of dollars on mining experts and engineers. He had hazy dreams of rubber and gold and copper and lumber and silver. Instead, he finds himself the principal owner of a diamond farm of 16,000 acres.

The region may turn out to be a Golconda. There is not much doubt that there are a thousand times as many gems there as there came from. From now on Mr. Ryan will never know what morning will bring him a cable inquiring what he wants done with a new Kohinoor, or Star of India.

It was generally conceded to be a clever move on the part of King Leopold when he induced Mr. Ryan and some of his American associates to take a share in the development of the Congo. Stories of atrocious had become rather persistent. The huge concession was finally entrusted to the Societe Forestiere et Miniere du Congo, King Leopold taking a one-fourth interest, the Congo Free State taking a half and Mr. Ryan and his colleagues taking the other fourth, which gave the Americans the undisputed possession of a territory as large as Vermont and New Hampshire combined.

"The Court will take judicial cognizance," said the Magistrate, after learning that the damage to the cab could be repaired for $5, "that a taxicab is no place for a lady contortionist who is lonely. If you will pay the $5 I will let it go at that."

"Haven't you the money?" asked the Magistrate. "Yes, sir, lots more than that," she said and blushed some more. "But I can't very well get it with all these men around. Er— I can't just."

"Oh, I see," said the Magistrate and blushed himself. "Just show the lady she came out in a minute waving a $5 bill triumphantly and handed it to the chauffeur and was allowed to go."

Iola Mandille, a contortionist and dancer by profession, just could not make her talented limbs behave at times, she explained to Magistrate Herrman in the West Side court to-day. And that was why she kicked the glass front out of a taxicab in front of Berry's restaurant at Seventh avenue and Forty-seventh street last night. She did not remember just how she came to be in the cab, but Policeman White was able to explain that part of it.

"I saw two waiters come out of the place with the lady between them," he said, "and they helped her into the cab and shut the door. Next thing I knew the front of the cab was coming out in big slivers of glass. The chauffeur turned around to see what was going on and she snapped off his cap with the toe of her shoe."

"She said something about being lonely in there all by herself. Before I could get to her she had started on the side window and that came out. Her foot got caught in a wedge of glass and she couldn't get it out and we couldn't get her out and she lay there on her back and made a disorderly noise and caused a crowd to collect until we got in from the other side and lifted her out."

"The Court will take judicial cognizance," said the Magistrate, after learning that the damage to the cab could be repaired for $5, "that a taxicab is no place for a lady contortionist who is lonely. If you will pay the $5 I will let it go at that."

"Haven't you the money?" asked the Magistrate. "Yes, sir, lots more than that," she said and blushed some more. "But I can't very well get it with all these men around. Er— I can't just."

"Oh, I see," said the Magistrate and blushed himself. "Just show the lady she came out in a minute waving a $5 bill triumphantly and handed it to the chauffeur and was allowed to go."

Iola Mandille, a contortionist and dancer by profession, just could not make her talented limbs behave at times, she explained to Magistrate Herrman in the West Side court to-day. And that was why she kicked the glass front out of a taxicab in front of Berry's restaurant at Seventh avenue and Forty-seventh street last night. She did not remember just how she came to be in the cab, but Policeman White was able to explain that part of it.

"I saw two waiters come out of the place with the lady between them," he said, "and they helped her into the cab and shut the door. Next thing I knew the front of the cab was coming out in big slivers of glass. The chauffeur turned around to see what was going on and she snapped off his cap with the toe of her shoe."

"She said something about being lonely in there all by herself. Before I could get to her she had started on the side window and that came out. Her foot got caught in a wedge of glass and she couldn't get it out and we couldn't get her out and she lay there on her back and made a disorderly noise and caused a crowd to collect until we got in from the other side and lifted her out."

"The Court will take judicial cognizance," said the Magistrate, after learning that the damage to the cab could be repaired for $5, "that a taxicab is no place for a lady contortionist who is lonely. If you will pay the $5 I will let it go at that."

"Haven't you the money?" asked the Magistrate. "Yes, sir, lots more than that," she said and blushed some more. "But I can't very well get it with all these men around. Er— I can't just."

"Oh, I see," said the Magistrate and blushed himself. "Just show the lady she came out in a minute waving a $5 bill triumphantly and handed it to the chauffeur and was allowed to go."

Iola Mandille, a contortionist and dancer by profession, just could not make her talented limbs behave at times, she explained to Magistrate Herrman in the West Side court to-day. And that was why she kicked the glass front out of a taxicab in front of Berry's restaurant at Seventh avenue and Forty-seventh street last night. She did not remember just how she came to be in the cab, but Policeman White was able to explain that part of it.

"I saw two waiters come out of the place with the lady between them," he said, "and they helped her into the cab and shut the door. Next thing I knew the front of the cab was coming out in big slivers of glass. The chauffeur turned around to see what was going on and she snapped off his cap with the toe of her shoe."

JILTED BY GIRL, YOUTH ENDS LIFE BY INHALING GAS

Young Cigar Salesman's Act Nearly Costs Lives of Rabbi's Family, Too.

A quarrel Sunday night with a girl named Bessie, who lives somewhere in St. Marks' Place, caused the suicide early to-day at No. 100 East Fourth street of Joseph E. Klein, twenty-one years old, a salesman employed by the United Cigar Stores Company at No. 215 Grand street.

The young man used illuminating gas for his self destruction, and but for the wakefulness of a member of the household the lives of the whole family of his uncle, Benjamin B. Gouth, a rabbi with whom he lived, would have been endangered.

Klein's father is a well-to-do leather merchant in Batavia, Austria-Hungary. The young man came to New York four years ago and attended day and night schools for three years. Then he went to work as a cigar salesman, utilizing his spare hours in study.

It was his intention to become a lawyer and he was to have entered class in the New York Law School next spring. His uncle says he was remarkably bright and had not only conquered the English language during his four years of residence here but had grounded himself in Latin and French.

GOT LETTERS AND PHONE MESSAGE EVERY DAY.

Klein's uncle and cousins knew that for almost a year he had been very attentive to a young woman they knew only as Bessie. Although he was often teased about his mysterious sweetheart, he refused to tell her full name or address. He said that would come out at the proper time. There was a letter from the girl awaiting him every evening when he went to work at the Grand street cigar store and she always called him up on the telephone at 10 o'clock at night.

Klein went to call on the girl Sunday evening. He returned three hours later weeping and told his cousin, Joseph Greenberg, he had dismissed him. On the advice of Greenberg, Klein wrote the girl a long letter of apology and mailed it before he retired.

No answer was received. There was no word from the girl when he reached the cigar store last night and she did not call him up at 10 o'clock. As soon as he got home at 1 o'clock this morning he turned on the gas in the little room, which has but one small window, opening into another room.

MEMBERS OF FAMILY MADE ILL BY GAS.

One of Rabbi Gouth's daughters was unable to sleep. She was wide awake at 3 o'clock this morning when she first smelled gas. The odor grew stronger and in the course of an hour she aroused all the other members of the family—some of them half ill from the gas they had been inhaling—and investigated. The door of Klein's room was found dead in bed.

He left a letter for his uncle apologizing for his act of suicide. He said he had lost his ambition and found life no longer bearable.

The Bedding Store 139 W. 125th St. Between 7th & Lenox Aves. Brass Bed STANDARD $10 value Special, $6.75 2-inch posts, five 5-8-inch fillers, with solid brass ball ends; all sizes; bright or satin finish. BOLSTER ROLLS, SPECIAL, 95c. BEDS AND BEDDING EXCLUSIVELY

Confidence and Quality Bring Jewelry Buyers to Lamberts

You can get all your Christmas jewelry under one roof at Lamberts, for our stocks include every form of Diamond and Solid Gold Jewelry, Diamond and Gold Rings, as well as Watches, Clocks and Silverware, and we can assure you a saving on all you buy.

If ever you made a gift of jewelry that turned out to be disappointing, bear in mind now that all Lambert jewelry is POSITIVELY GUARANTEED alike as to material, factory work and price; that we have been making and selling guaranteed jewelry for thirty-five years. You need not pay when you order, but we shall, if you desire, lay away your gifts until you need them for delivery, and you may pay then.

Your Money Saved on Every Diamond

The saving covers diamonds of fine quality, the only kind we are interested in or expect to interest you in. Every diamond we show you is pure in color and cut to perfection. All are selected by a member of our firm who makes a buying trip to Europe every year and pays spot cash to the diamond cutters. As long credit is the rule with them, their charges to us show how glad they are to get ready money. ALL THE MOUNTINGS—solid 18 and 14 karat gold and platinum—of Lambert Diamonds and Jewelry ARE MADE IN OUR OWN FACTORY.

Solitaire Diamond Engagement Rings from $10.00 to $1,500.00. Picture shows size of fine white diamond, in man's solid 14-karat gold kypsy style ring. Radiant Christmas gift for $100.00.

Cluster ring with twenty-eight fine diamonds, beautifully matched and attractively set in platinum, surrounding a beautiful pearl; price, $125.00.

Wedding Ring Popularity Still Spreading

In a city where the marriage rate is rising as it is in New York the popularity of Lambert Seamless Solid Gold Wedding Rings spreads steadily. It ought to, for no stronger, more beautiful, more durable wedding rings are or can be made. We guarantee them in every shape and style. Every ring is made from one piece of gold. No charge for engraving.

Benefit in Buying Christmas Watches Here

Your advantage in buying CHRISTMAS WATCHES at LAMBERTS is twofold. In the first place, EVERY WATCH IS DOUBLY GUARANTEED. The manufacturer says a movement is all right, but we back him up ONLY WHEN OUR OWN WATCHMAKERS HAVE INSPECTED THAT WATCH PIECE BY PIECE. We guarantee solid gold jewelry and watches only after the United States Assay Office has passed upon it.

In the second place WE GUARANTEE EVERY PRICE to be the lowest for which the watch in question can be sold.

Lady's Watch; good, heavy, solid 14-karat gold hunting case, richly engraved with leaf and flower. Waltham, Elgin or Lambert works. Only $25.00.

Lady's solid 14-karat gold hunting case, plain polished for monogram, which we will engrave without charge. Choice of Waltham, Elgin or Lambert works. Price only $22.50.

We sell hundreds of men's solid gold hunting case watches like the one, which is engine turned and artistically engraved. Fine, heavy cases with high-grade movement. Waltham, Elgin or Lambert works, as you choose. First-class value at $50.00.

Remembering that all watches are guaranteed in all respects, you will appreciate such prices as these: Men's Solid Gold Watches, open face or hunting case, $25.00 up. Men's Gold Filled Watches, with the famous "Crescent" cases, $14.50 up. Men's Sterling Silver Watches, $8.75 up. Ladies' Solid Gold Watches, $7.50 up. Ladies' Gold Filled Watches, $10.00 up. Ladies' Sterling Silver Watches, $3.50 up. Boys' Sterling Silver Watches, $5.00 up.

Fancy Cluster Rings, $3.00 Up

Customers who seek really excellent, well-made jewelry for inexpensive Christmas gifts are delighted with the Lambert exhibit of solid gold fancy cluster rings, set with precious and semi-precious stones, for ladies and children. Considering that these rings are made with as much care as costlier ones, the price of each is a wonder of economy.

Fancy solid gold ring, with three precious stones, rubies. $3.50. Six sapphires, encircling a fine pearl. $9.50. Two bright diamonds, flanking a sapphire. $14.50. Two diamonds, flanking a sapphire. $20.00.

Solid Gold Christmas Brooches, $1.25 Up.

There are hundreds of solid gold brooches, many of which may serve as watch pins. Even the simplest of them is a work of art. Such brooches as are not made in our own factory from wholly original designs we buy in large quantities of makers of high reputation. We pay spot cash, and are therefore able to place before you the BEST VALUES as well as the highest grade of workmanship.

All Good Styles of Gold Scarf Pins

Scarf pins from $1.00 to $1,000.00, and all guaranteed solid gold. Many set with diamonds directly imported by Lambert Brothers, and therefore low-priced; also with pearls, amethysts, topazes, rubies, sapphires and other precious stones.

Amethyst, mounted in solid gold. $2.50. Solid 14-karat gold, rose finish, sapphire pearl. $6.00. Solid 14-karat gold, rose finish, diamond and sapphire. $9.00. Four diamonds and a sapphire, set in 14-karat gold. $14.00.

LAMBERT BROTHERS

Third Ave., Cor. 58th St. OPEN UNTIL 6.30. SATURDAY NIGHTS UNTIL 10

When You Pay the Price Get the Best—Pabst

WHY pay the same price for other beer when you can buy the Pabst Milwaukee Beer at $1.25 per case of 24 bottles, either Bohemian Brand (Light) or Doppel Brau (Dark). If you have never used this superior beer in your home you and your family have a delightful treat coming. Order a case sent home today and insist upon

"The one best beer in the world"

DABST
Milwaukee Beer
$1.25 Per Case

The reason Pabst Milwaukee Beer agrees with you better than any other is because it is made from Pabst exclusive process 8-day malt instead of the ordinary 4-day process malt and because it is absolutely aged and mellow. It is the cleanest beer brewed because from mash tub to bottle it is never touched by human hands nor does it come in contact with any but sterilized utensils and filtered air. Thus it is that no beer is so good and so clean and so healthful and so wholesome for the family as the famous Pabst Milwaukee Beer, and it costs you no more than beer not so good.

For Sale By All Grocers and Wine and Liquor Dealers